

Superintendent's Highlight November 9, 2018

There are 8 seasoned players from last year's Boys' Volleyball team that went 12-6 and made it to the semifinals of the Nassau County playoffs. The Hawks wanted more this year, so they entered the 2018 season with high expectations and lofty goals. The Hawks steamrolled through the regular season and showed us what it means to be Plainview Perfect. They went undefeated (14-0) this season to claim their 17th Conference Championship in the process.

The boys entered the Nassau County Class A Volleyball tournament as the #1 seed. On Wednesday night, in the Nassau County finals, the Hawks faced their long-time rival, Massapequa, for the right to be crowned champions. It was a hard, tough match. The Hawks had to battle back after losing the first game, but in the end, they won three games to one. With this victory, the Boys' Volleyball team can add something else to their already impressive resume - NASSAU COUNTY CHAMPIONS!!! This is the 10th County Championship in the program's history. They were led that night by seniors Justin Ilouljian (11 kills and 4 blocks) and Nicholas Galasso (16 kills).

The Hawks will play Sachem North on Saturday, November 10th, at 12:00 p.m. in the Long Island Championship. The game will be played at Suffolk Community College in Brentwood. Tickets are $7. Congratulations to Coach Russi Villalta and the entire Boys' Volleyball team. Good luck this Saturday. We need everyone there to help them claim their next victory!!! Go Hawks!!!
